Program Location

While community-based programs are the only program records that must be submitted in the monthly extract, the addition of the program location variable allows juvenile probation departments to track a juvenile's progress while in a post-adjudication facility or JJAEP. Programs offered in pre-adjudication detention facilities should not be entered on the program table or into the program registry. The four program locations are outlined below:

Community
- This is the most frequently used program location and should be used for those programs that are provided in the community, both before and after disposition. Programs are considered to be located in the community if they are offered in juvenile probation department offices or provided by outside contractors in a community location. Community-based programs include surveillance programs like electronic monitoring, home detention, and intensive supervision. These programs MUST be entered in the TJJD Program & Services Registry and be submitted in the monthly extract.

Facility (Post Adjudication)
- This is for programs that are offered in post adjudication facilities. The tracking of post adjudication facility programs is not required; however, departments who operate a post adjudication facility may track a juvenile's progress in programming. Only those departments who operate a post adjudication facility should utilize this program location.

JJAEP
- This is for programs that are offered in juvenile justice alternative placement locations. The tracking of JJAEP programs is not required; however, departments who operate a JJAEP may track a juvenile's progress in programming. Only those departments who operate a JJAEP should utilize this program location.

Other
- This is for programs that fit into none of the categories listed above. Ideally, this program location should be used sparingly. One example is a program that may start in a post-adjudication facility but continue in the community after the placement's end.
